

SELF-EVALUATION: LEADING RESEARCH AREA, FACULTY OF HUMANITIES

The Faculty of Humanities at Stockholm University has, as per the University Board's decision on 5 December 2008, received additional resources which, from 2009 and six years onwards, have been allocated to the Faculty's leading research areas. In accordance with the University Board's original intention, the additional resources should be used to finance leading research in the humanities. The aim of this investment is for strong research areas to be able to maintain and improve their positions.

The Board of the Faculty of Humanities has decided that a new evaluation should be conducted to determine which fields should receive the additional resources starting 1 January 2015. In addition, the Board has decided that a group of five external experts should make an overall assessment on the basis of reported research output and propose five to eight research areas that they consider to be the strongest, and thus the most qualified, research areas within the Faculty. The term "leading research area" has been discussed in many different contexts for a long time. The designation is based on Stockholm University's vision, according to which research should "be nationally leading and internationally prominent".

The self-evaluations should follow this template and be written in English. The headings may not be edited. The self-evaluations should be submitted to the Faculty by 20 June 2014 and sent to Henric Hertzman (henric.hertzman@su.se).

Description of leading or future area of research

Department (if the field is interdepartmental, specify the coordinating department as well as the other departments involved)	The Institute for Interpreting and Translation Studies (TÖI) at the Department of Swedish and multilingualism
Name of field (Swedish)	Översättningsvetenskap (tolkning och översättning)
Name of field (English)	Translation and Interpreting Studies (TIS)
Background/origins, collaboration, development opportunities (maximum 5,000 characters including spaces)	Since 1986, TÖI is a unifying force for TIS in Sweden. It has strong foundations in interdisciplinary research and strong teaching traditions. TÖI is the only university department in Sweden gathering lecturers and researchers in TIS, thus guaranteeing a coherent and continued research environment. Translation and interpreting (T&amp;I) in all forms gain ever more ground in today's globalized world. Sweden is no exception. TIS research is therefore important and benefits everyone. The small yet dynamic group of researchers covers a wide variety of fields in TIS: interpreter-mediated interaction, sociology of translation, reception of translation, audiovisual translation, cognitive processes and expertise in T&amp;I. Researchers serve as editors of different journals: Interpreting, Perspectives, Journal of Audiovisual Translation Studies, Translation &amp; Interpreting. The research environment is developing by theoretical and methodological discussions, often with international and national researchers (research seminars (one/month), specialized seminars (3/term)). TÖI has a lively tradition of international workshops and network meetings (at least one/year) and conferences. TÖI attracts international researchers for longer stays. Recently, Isabelle Perez (Heriot-Watt University, U.K), Kristina Mullanmaa (University of Tartu, Estonia) and Cecilia Alvstad (University of Oslo, Norway). In 14/15, TÖI hosts Sabine Braun (University of Surrey, UK) leading expert on distance interpreting, Michaela Wolf (University of Graz, Austria) leading expert in the sociology of translation and Henrik Gottlieb (Copenhagen University, Denmark) leading expert on media translation. TÖI's researchers have received national and international funding for various on-going projects. Wadensjö got EU funding for the QUALITAS project (2012-14) on court interpreting, and from the Swedish Research Council (SRC) for ad-hoc interpreting in Swedish elderly care. Lindqvist was funded by the SRC for Caribbean literature in Swedish translation (2013-15). TÖI's researchers have published seminal works, further strengthening the position of TIS. Wadensjö's work on interpreter-mediated conversations Interpreting as Interaction has been ground-breaking. Englund Dimitrova's monograph on translation process Expertise and Explicitation in the Translation Process has great international impact. Pedersen's monograph Subtitling norms for television on subtitling was one of the first in its field and is widely cited.

TÖI promotes research in new fields in TIS: Norberg spent spring 2014 at the University of Helsinki (SU sabbatical term) focusing on print interpreting. Tiselius starts research on child language brokering. TIS are present in other departments at SU as well, examples are Van Meerbergen (translation and reception of Dutch literature for children and young people (Baltic languages, Finnish and German)) and Petterson (Nordic medieval and early modern bible translation, (Swedish)); both collaborate with TÖI.

TÖI now has a PhD-program (autumn 2013), the first in Sweden. The PhD students strengthen the fields of audiovisual translation (Meister) and the sociology of translation (Svahn). PhD students in TIS at other SU departments and universities also collaborate and get support from TÖI, Mendoza Åsberg (norms of translation, (Slavic languages and literature)) and Sannholm (cognitive processes in translation, University of Tarragona, Spain) are two examples.

T&I have direct implications for people's everyday life. TÖI is actively involved in outreach activities and the academization of the professions. Larsson, Meister and Svahn are active literary translators, and Sannholm is a technical translator. Larsson and Meister are also involved in a publishing project on literary translation, which got support from the Swedish Arts Council. Tiselius is an active conference and community interpreter. Lindqvist is a frequently requested lecturer at the Swedish professional translator organisations. In the autumn of 2014, TÖI is co-organizing (with the European Commission) a national conference on procurement and quality in T&I.

For almost 30 years, TÖI has promoted a joint platform for Swedish and international TIS research. Over the years, TÖI has become an internationally renowned research institution, despite limited resources and (recently) important organizational restructuring. TIS being proclaimed a leading research area would mean increased possibility to strengthen different areas of research at TÖI through course development, new PhD students, and research collaboration with other researchers and institutions. Researchers in TIS are typically spread out at different departments and SU is no exception. With TIS as a leading research area, TÖI would have ample opportunities through existing, and new, partnerships for developing all the different areas in TIS (interpreting, audiovisual translation and translation), in collaboration with different departments, inside and outside SU, and thereby strengthen the role of TIS as a leading research area at SU.

Personnel working in the field

Personnel as of 1 January 2014<sup>1</sup> (weighted numbers)	Indefinite-term employment		Fixed-term employment<sup>2</sup>
	Men	Women	Men	Women
Professors		1
Associate professors		1
Others holding PhDs<sup>3</sup>	4	1.9
Doctoral students			1	3
All researchers	Name		Title	Proportion of research in the field (percentage of full-time)
	Cecilia Wadensjö		Professor	50 %
	Yvonne Lindqvist		Associate Professor	50 %
	Birgitta Englund Dimitrova		Professor emeritus	50 %
	Mats Larsson		Senior Lecturer	30 %
	Ulf Norberg		Senior Lecturer	30 %
	Jan Pedersen		Senior Lecturer	30 %
	Jonatan Pettersson		Senior Lecturer	50 %
	Elisabet Tiselius		Senior Lecturer	30 %
	Sara van Meerbergen		Senior Lecturer	80 %
	Elin Svahn		PhD student	80 %
	Lova Meister		PhD student	80 %
	Lisa Mendoza Åsberg		PhD student	80 %
	Raphael Sannholm		PhD student	50 %

<sup>1</sup> The number should be reported as full-time equivalents. If a visiting professor is tied to the field at 20%, this should be reported as 0.2. If a professor divides his/her time between two fields, each proportion should be reported (e.g. 0.5 for each field). Consequently, the total number of employees usually does not equal whole numbers.

<sup>2</sup> Personnel with fixed-term employment include all employees without an indefinite-term contract, such as visiting professors, substitutes, postdocs, project-based employees, etc.

<sup>3</sup> This includes lecturers who are not associate professors, as well as researchers holding PhDs.
